

Pupils from Northampton University visit our St Andrews Site

Architectural Technology students from Northampton University visited our £46 million Residential Mens Health Unit scheme for St Andrews Healthcare recently.

The students were shown around the site and were hugely impressed and pleased to be able to visit a real live site to help them connect theory to practice. The students have been invited to return for another site visit at a later stage in the construction to which they eagerly accepted.

Below is an extract from a thank you letter received from the university.

8th May 2009

Dear David,

Site visit to St Andrew's Mental Health Unit development

Grateful thanks for very generously giving of your time yesterday to talk to our Architectural Technology students about St Andrew's, and also allowing us to visit the site and see construction work in action. Students were hugely impressed and have learned a great deal from the visit, the 'real life' aspects helping them to connect theory with practice. Also impressive was the effort being made in terms of 'considerate construction', and the message won't have been lost on students that any successful venture requires compromise, consensus and cooperation. We are very keen to revisit at a later stage, and it's generous of you to offer a return visit.

Thanks again to you and your team for this fantastic opportunity, and also for the coffee and biscuits!

Best wishes,

Dr Garry Campion
